

PHILANTHROPY IS QUESTIONED

Government Doubts Kindly Motives of United States Steel Corporation.

BIG MERGER IS DISCUSSED

Gary Insists Right Thing Was Done in Taking Over Tennessee Properties.

New York, June 13.—"If the United States Steel Corporation paid $35,000,000 for the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and $14,000,000 more to put it on its feet, not because it wanted the property, but to save the firm of Moore & Schley and other banking concerns holding Tennessee Coal and Iron stock from ruin in the panic of 1907, wouldn't it have been better for the corporation to loan Moore & Schley $10,000,000 or $15,000,000, or give it to them outright?"

This, in substance, was the question Jacob M. Dickinson, attorney for the government dissolution suit against the corporation, asked its chairman, Judge Albert H. Gary, to-day.

Judge Gary had testified that the money spent in the company's acquisition and rehabilitation could have brought far greater profits if put into other plants.

"I will say 'No,'" was Judge Gary's answer. "I believe we did the best and most prudent thing under the circumstances."

Judge Gary expressed surprise when the government put into evidence articles published in steel trade journals as late as September, 1905, reporting meetings of various steel associations, at which it was stated that prices were agreed upon. In one it was stated that it was voted to investigate members charged with price-cutting.

Judge Gary said he never had read the articles referred to.

"I am surprised to learn," he said, "that such meetings were held as late as that. I am surprised the government didn't take notice of them."

"Well, it takes the government a long time to get started, but like the mills of the gods, when they do grind, they grind exceedingly fine," remarked Judge Dickinson.

"And, sometimes both the just and the unjust," replied the witness.

Turning to the question of the wire pools, whose members were indicted in 1912, Judge Dickinson called the attention of the witness to his testimony that, in 1904, he had given an order to the corporation's subsidiaries to withdraw from all pools and had not discovered the participation of the American Steel and Wire Company in the wire pool until 1908 "through an outsider."

"What steps did you take to inform yourself that your orders had been carried out?"

"I hadn't been looking for burglars in my house, and I had no reason to suppose that any were there," replied the chairman.

"I assumed that our general solicitor's office had disposed of the whole matter."

"What disciplinary steps did you take when you learned four years later that your orders had been violated? Did you discharge anybody?"

"No," he answered. "I was thoroughly satisfied that the thing would never occur again. I did not want to deprive men whose families depended upon them of their support. They were fined by the court and disgraced."

Admits Making Statement.

The Federal attorney put into evidence a statement attributed to Judge Gary published after a meeting of steel manufacturers in 1911. In this statement was reported as saying that the subsidiaries of the corporation proposed to meet the price reductions of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, and that "it is believed their prices will be generally followed." The prices in question were quoted.

The witness said that he had made the statement, but that "some one else inserted the prices."

"No one," he added, "was under the least obligation to follow these prices."

Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France, and a former partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., is expected to testify to-morrow.

SOME SIDELIGHTS ON THURSDAY'S PRIMARY

Nobody Able to Explain Why It Took So Long to Count the Vote.

Nobody has yet been able to explain why it took the election officials so long to count that ballot. They did not send in the last box until 9:15 o'clock yesterday morning, an hour and a half after an extra edition of The Times-Dispatch was on the street with the official returns. It sounds impossible, but it's a fact. Aside from the delay in tabulating the vote, the feature of the whole thing was the exciting battle for fifth place on the legislative ticket. So often did it change that the result was not definitely known until the figures came from First Madison, the prize winner this year in being late.

By midnight Thursday it was pretty well known that Griggs had been defeated by Satterfield for City Sergeant. It was known then, too, that Mercer and Tresson had won, so all eyes turned to the fight in Lee Ward, between Martin and Ferrandini for the city committee, and the tail place on the legislative ticket. Naturally, there was a big desire to have first-hand information as to the exact size of the Satterfield majority, for he was understood that thousands of dollars had been wagered on the result and the size of the beating, and men who had stayed up all night wanted some comfort. If it could be found, before they went to bed. Few found it.

Never One So Late.

There never was such a late primary so far as a morning newspaper was concerned. When the regular mail edition of The Times-Dispatch went to press the fact was evident that Satterfield, Mercer and Tresson had been nominated, just as it was certain that Hobson, Cox, Myers and Montague had been elected to the legislature. At press time Tresson was fifth man. The mail edition carried his picture along with the statement that at that hour he was certain of the honor, although it was plain that he returns might change the result. With the mails came the news necessary to make a new paper for the city, and figures were changing so rapidly about 4 o'clock that it was difficult to get heads and tails of the real situation. Hobson, Cox, Montague and Myers, the faces of late returns, were safely nominated, but that old fifth place job was up in the air.

The last word printed put Curtis fifth, but when the form was being wheeled to the stereotyping room there came a dash that Cannon had jumped ahead of Curtis, right behind Montague. There was no time to change type, but the distinguished face of Captain Curtis was lifted, and in its place there was stamped the picture of Cannon. This explains why it puzzled you when you read the paper at breakfast time, but the fact that you wanted it a little earlier than usual made it impossible to wait.

Heating the Committee.

Having looked after the city run, it was simply a question then of waiting for the final tabulation for an extra. The Times-Dispatch had everything except two precincts—First Madison and Second Jefferson. It should be stated here that this earlier information came long before it was received by the City Committee at the City Auditorium, for the very obvious reason that as soon as a precinct vote was counted the policeman on duty there called The Times-Dispatch and gave the result over the telephone. An hour later the election officials drifted into the auditorium. But nothing could be heard from the missing two. A reporter was hustled to First Madison, at 414 North Eighth Street, only to find the doors all locked. The counters had gone—that, at least, was the supposition. Then he shot over to the East End, got the count from Second Jefferson, and raced across town to the auditorium, after telephoning the vote. At the auditorium there was another long wait. Nobody could find the judges and things from First Madison. The mystery got bigger and bigger. It soon grew into a scandal and a sensation. Into his taxi cab the reporter hopped, and when he got back to First Madison he kicked upon the door and found them inside, still counting. They had counted down through Satterfield and Griggs.

Some Final Returns.

From this precinct the reporter got and telephoned in the total as far down as Mercer, and that gave The Times-Dispatch returns from every precinct in town. Copies of the extra were being read at the auditorium long before the official report came from the last precinct in Madison Ward. The Times-Dispatch figures were so nearly correct and official that the Satterfield majority was given as 739. And that is exactly what the city committee found had received.

Hobson's Wonder.

Hobson's great victory was one of the features of the day. He ran like a wild man, away from everything, carrying every ward, sixteen of the twenty-two precincts, splitting even in some, and just a fraction behind in others. It was a remarkable tribute to the young man, and justified the prediction of his friends that if the primary for the Administrative Board had been two weeks later he would have been among the big five. At heart, however, he is probably glad he didn't get that job. The defeat of James E. Cannon was extremely disappointing to him, for he was ranked as one of the ablest men in the race, and one who would be heard from in the Legislature. The defeat of Captain Curtis carried deep regret to his political comrades, but he accepted it gracefully, and went to bed long before he found that he had failed to cross the tape.

Martin and Ferrandini.

Just why there should have been such keen interest in the fight between Chairman Miles M. Martin and Frank Ferrandini, of the City Democratic Committee, was hard to explain, except that the ground that this annexation question is closer to the people than the professional politicians will admit. It was due to Ferrandini's activity that the Law and Equity Court put the question on the committee's referendum plan, and that proceeding, when no definite annexation lines have been agreed upon, did not satisfy what Judge Rhea would call the rank and file. Aside from the Martin-Ferrandini contest, nobody seemed to care who was in the race for city committee and justices of the peace. The one fat job of the day went to Satterfield, and his bald head bobbed up and down every minute yesterday as he accepted congratulations and went on about his work. And yet, when you come to think of it, a hundred years from now nobody will give a damn who did carry a thought. Why, there won't be a man living then who can give you the betting odds on Satterfield. So just go ahead and sweep off your sidewalk and get to work. Everybody is happy, and the smoke still comes out the chimney just the same.

INVITED TO SALISBURY.

Bid Made for Next Meeting of State Pharmaceutical Association.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Salisbury, N. C., June 13.—The State Pharmaceutical Association was this week invited to hold its next meeting in Salisbury. The invitation was extended by the Salisbury Industrial Club, and the local druggists joined heartily in the movement to bring the pharmacists to Salisbury for the 1914 state convention.

The Salisbury Fire Department will send eight representatives to the State tournament at Wilmington in July. The company will enter one of the races, but will participate in all the business of the annual convention. A team and wagon will be taken for use in the parade. Chief W. A. Brown is one of the enthusiastic firemen of the State, and will boost his department at Wilmington.

Professor A. T. Allen returned to-day from Raleigh, where he attended an interesting meeting of conductors and teachers' institutes. He has recently been re-elected superintendent of the Salisbury schools, and is keeping abreast of the profession in the State. The North Carolina Veterinary Association will hold its annual convention in Salisbury the latter part of June. The dates will be determined very soon. A large number of veterinarians are expected here for the meeting.

Salisbury Aerle of Eagles gave a big supper in the clubrooms of the lodge to-night. The attendance was large, and the members had a most enjoyable time.

MAY ASK RECOUNT OF PRECINCT IN JEFFERSON WARD

for holding back two precincts in Jefferson and two in Madison Wards until late in the morning is shown by the fact that the largest precinct in the city—Fourth Clay—reported a total vote of 981 votes before 3 A. M.

Satterfield and Griggs.

The official returns of the sergeant-at-arms contest by wards are as follows: Jefferson-Madison.

Lee Clay, son, son Total Satterfield 1,122 1,658 1,294 957 5,031 Griggs 712 1,124 1,119 1,049 1,361

Early returns giving Jefferson Ward to Satterfield were in error by more than 100 votes, and very large wagers are said to hinge on the figures in that ward.

Until the last precinct came in, just after 9 o'clock, the fifth place in the House of Delegates was in doubt.

The final official totals, stars in each case denoting those officially declared the winners, were:

Its treasurer, Earle Sibley, and its sergeant-at-arms, E. J. Fagan, a man entirely of the committee will be made Already there is mention of Dr. Charles V. Carrington, James H. Price and Secretary Duke for the chairmanship.

Except in Clay Ward, where the voters had no choice, those who have taken part in fighting annexation ran far behind the ticket. C. W. Hodges, of Jefferson Ward, who spoke frequently during the recent campaign in opposition to annexation, running from the bottom of the sixteen candidates in his ward, Ferrandini's victory over Chairman Martin was taken as a clear index of how Lee Ward stands on annexation.

Ferrandini Not Out for Chairmanship.

Thanks Voters of Lee Ward for Approval of Stand on Annexation.

Expressing his gratitude to the voters of Lee Ward, who, in returning him to the City Democratic Committee, voted their approval of his stand against the annexation referendum, Frank Ferrandini last night positively announced that he was not a candidate for the chairmanship of the committee.

"I am entirely satisfied," said Mr. Ferrandini. "I believed that the committee was exceeding its powers when it was led into a fight against annexation, and was surprised by the course taken by the committee. When certain members of the committee attempted to secure my defeat for re-election, because of my attitude on that issue, I found it necessary to appeal to the people, and they have fully sustained me. I am sorry that the circumstances made it necessary to make the fight against Chairman Martin, and greatly regret that he could not also have been re-elected. I have a high regard for him, and know that he has worked hard for the committee and party. I will, under no

FOREIGN SAILORS DEMAND LIBERTY

Refuse to Store Coal in Bunkers of War Vessel, and Negroes Are Hired to Do Work.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Norfolk, Va., June 12.—What would be termed a small-size mutiny, if it happened on an American ship, took place to-day on the Brazilian Dreadnaught Minas Geraes, in Hampton Roads, when the crew refused to coal the vessel until given liberty.

Twenty-one hundred tons of coal were sent to the big warship in barges, and the crew was expected to store it away in the bunkers on the vessel. When ordered to get to work the men refused, declaring they wanted liberty, and must have it before they would coal the vessel.

The vessel took such a determined stand, according to reports received here to-night, that Captain Costa, commanding the vessel, was obliged to employ about 200 American negroes to do the work.

Two sailors from the Minas Geraes in a group of American sailors to-night, told how they refused to obey the order to coal the ship.

"We want liberty," one of them said. "We want ship after we have the time." "If we did anything like that," said one of the American sailors, "we would be lucky if we got off with less than five years in the Federal prison at Boston."
